Read It Forward

Placing Books Where They Matter Most*

JACKRABBIT PUNKIN PUBLISHING LLC

STORIES THAT INSPIRE. BOOKS THAT ENDURE.

Every Book Has a Next Reader

Why the Read It Forward Program exists

A book does its most important work after the last page is turned. It gets talked about, handed to a friend, left on a table in a waiting room, or tucked into a care package headed overseas. Somewhere along the way, it finds the person who needed it most.

The Read It Forward Program was built on that simple idea. Jackrabbit Punkin Publishing believes books are tools for encouragement, healing, and connection, and that nobody should go without a good story simply because it never reached them. Through sponsorships, partnerships, and readers who pass their own copies along, the program places books in the hands of veterans, service members, students, families, and communities.

This guide is for everyone who wants to be part of that journey:

- Readers who have finished a book and want it to keep going.
 - Organizations such as schools, libraries, churches, and veterans' groups that would like books for the people they serve.
 - Sponsors who want to place books in their community.

*A book on a shelf is a finished story.
A book passed forward is a story still being written.*

Thank you for reading, for sharing, and for helping a story reach its next reader.

How Read It Forward Works

From a sponsorship to a book in someone's hands

Read It Forward is a community book distribution initiative operated by Jackrabbit Punkin Publishing LLC. Books reach readers in two ways: through sponsorships that fund new copies, and through readers who pass their own books along.

The Sponsorship Path

- 1 A sponsor chooses a level. Sponsorships begin at $100 for five books, and each level builds on the one before it.
- 2 Recipients are identified. Sponsors and readers may recommend organizations, and organizations may request books directly.
- 3 Books are purchased and distributed. Jackrabbit Punkin Publishing handles ordering, shipping, and delivery to the recipient organization.
- 4 Sponsors are recognized. Every sponsor is listed on the Read It Forward Sponsor Wall, with added benefits at each level. Sponsors may also choose to remain anonymous.

The Reader Path

Any reader can join the program at no cost by passing a finished book to someone new. A bookplate and a journey log, both included in this guide, let each copy carry its own story from reader to reader.

Pass Your Copy Forward

1

Finished a Jackrabbit Punkin book? Add a bookplate, write a short note, record it in the journey log, and hand it to someone new. It costs nothing, and it may be the most personal gift you give this year.

See pages 5–7.

Recommend a Recipient

2

Know a veterans' post, classroom, church, library, or youth program that would benefit from books? Tell us about them, and we will consider them for an upcoming distribution.

See page 13.

Request Books for Your Organization

3

Schools, libraries, faith communities, and community groups may request books for the people they serve. Tell us who you serve and how the books will be used.

See pages 9–10.

Become a Sponsor

4

Individuals, families, businesses, and groups can fund books for their community. Sponsorships start at $100 for five books, and every level is recognized.

See page 11.

Share the Journey

When a book finds its next reader, we would love to hear about it. Stories, photos, and notes from readers and organizations help show what a single book can do. The Share Your Story page on page 12 is a good place to start.

Passing a Book Forward

How to send your copy on its next journey

- 1 Think of your next reader. Who came to mind while you were reading? A friend, a fellow veteran, a teacher, a grandchild, a neighbor, or someone going through a season the book speaks to.
- 2 Add a bookplate. Print and cut out a bookplate from page 6 and tape or glue it inside the front cover. Sign your first name so the next reader knows who sent it.
- 3 Write a short note. A sentence or two is plenty: a page to look for, a line that stayed with you, or why you thought of them.
- 4 Start the journey log. Print the log on page 7, fold it, and tuck it into the book. Each reader adds a line before passing it on.
- 5 Hand it over. In person, by mail, or by leaving it where it will be found, such as a little free library, a waiting room, or a base or community library.

Ideas for Your Note

"This book reminded me of you because..."

"Look for page _____. It stayed with me."

"When you finish, pass it to someone who needs it."

"I hope this finds you the way it found me."

"Read this one with someone you love."

"Add your name to the log, then keep it moving."

A kind reminder: for your safety, write only first names and cities in a book that will travel. Leave out phone numbers, home addresses, and other personal details.

Read It Forward Bookplates

Print on cardstock or label paper, cut along the dashed lines, and place one inside the front cover.

Ways to Read It Forward in Your Community

No sponsorship or JPP book needed. Just one meaningful action.

1 Create a Reading Moment

Gather a few people for a story hour, a family reading night, a book discussion, or an informal reading circle.

2 Help Build a Small Collection

Work with others to fill a classroom shelf, a community reading corner, a waiting room, or a youth space.

3 Connect an Organization

Introduce a school, library, church, veterans' group, or family program to books and reading opportunities, including this program.

4 Give Your Time

Read aloud, help at a literacy event, or support a teacher or librarian who is building a collection one book at a time.

5 Invite Someone Else In

Ask a friend, family, business, church, or civic group to join the effort. Try: "We're helping put books into the hands of readers in our community. Would you like to be part of it?"

JPP COMMUNITY PRINCIPLE

*Don't assume what a community needs.
Ask. Listen. Then help.*

Bringing Books to the People You Serve

For schools, libraries, faith communities, and community groups

Who May Request Books

Organizations that serve veterans, service members, military families, students, readers, youth, or their wider community are welcome to apply. This includes schools and school libraries, public libraries, churches and faith communities, veterans' organizations, family readiness groups, youth programs, and community centers.

What to Include in Your Request

- Your organization's name, a contact person, and how to reach them.
- Who you serve and about how many people.
- Which titles fit your readers, and how many copies you are hoping for.
- How the books will be used, such as a classroom set, a lending shelf, a book club, a care package, or a gift to members.

Use the request form on the next page, or send the same information by email.

How Recipients Are Selected

Requests are matched with available sponsorships as books become available. Final recipient selection rests with Jackrabbit Punkin Publishing LLC. Submitting a request does not guarantee a distribution, but every request is read and kept on file.

What We Would Love Back (optional)

A short note or photo of the books in use, shared with permission, helps show sponsors what their support accomplishes. Please do not send photos that identify children or other people without their permission, or their parent's or guardian's permission.

Sponsorship Levels

Help put books into more hands. Each level builds on the one before it.

LEVEL	CONTRIBUTION	BOOKS	BENEFITS
Page Pal	$100	5 books	Recognition on the JPP Read It Forward Sponsor Wall
Chapter Champion	$250	12 books	All Page Pal benefits, plus a short sponsor message or dedication with your listing
Bookshelf Builder	$500	25 books	All Chapter Champion benefits, plus a custom bookmark featuring your name or logo with each of the 25 sponsored books
Literacy Trailblazer	$1,000+	50+ books	All Bookshelf Builder benefits, plus a Certificate of Appreciation

Give Openly or Anonymously

Sponsors at every level may choose to remain anonymous. Your books still reach readers in exactly the same way. Just let us know when you arrange your sponsorship.

How Sponsorship Works

- Choose a level and contact Jackrabbit Punkin Publishing to arrange your sponsorship.
- You may recommend recipient organizations. Final recipient selection remains with Jackrabbit Punkin Publishing LLC unless otherwise agreed in writing.
- Books are purchased and distributed through the program, and you receive the benefits of your level.

Sponsorships are generally not tax-deductible charitable contributions. See the program disclosures on the last page.
